“Like all brothers, they were pretty competitive. For instance, they both wanted to be the first to fly the Kitty Hawk. So they settled the dispute with a good old-fashioned coin toss. Which, by the way, Wilbur won. But because of bad weather, it was Orville who actually got it off the ground.”

"Every time I take to the air, I just think about how the Wright Brothers did it first, over 90 years ago, in a contraption of wood and canvas."

“For years no one could touch the records he set in the broad jump, 100 and 200 meters. But he was a champion of the spirit as well as the sport. He worked closely with the community, especially the youth, constantly traveling and teaching them what he always believed himself. That, no matter what people may say or think, you can do and be anything as long as you believe in yourself.”
