

AN AMERICAN LEGACY

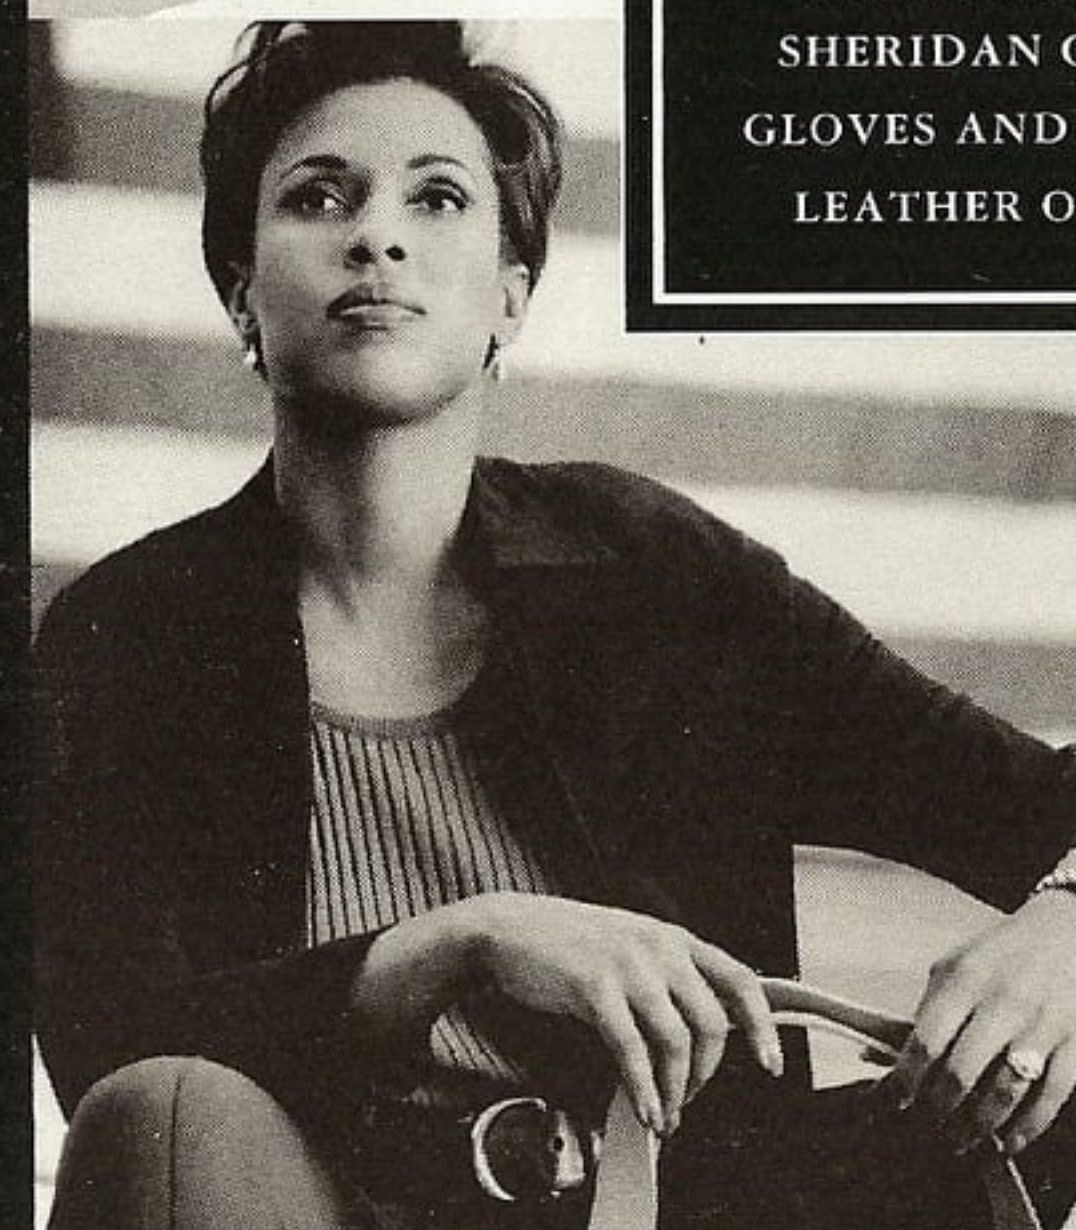

Coach. An American Legacy.

Since 1776, George Washington has come to represent a symbol of freedom and democracy. On the cover, we feature George Washington's great great great great great great grandniece, Joanne Washington Blodgett, with her Coach Court Bag.

As you turn these pages, you will come upon the descendants of other famous Americans with their Coach bags. As a testament to the wonderful quilt that is America, they vary in race and gender and come from different backgrounds. They are united by a common bond—their ancestors have all become symbols of American ideals.

Over the last 52 years, Coach has developed a legacy as well, one of quality and fine craftsmanship. Just as Joanne Washington Blodgett is a legacy of American tradition, so is every bag, belt and accessory crafted by the hands of Coach master leatherworkers.

Alexander Graham Bell's great granddaughter,
Sarah Grosvenor, with her Coach Regis Bag.

THE MADISON COLLECTION

“As a young man, Alexander Graham Bell was fascinated by sound. Not only was his mother hard of hearing, his father and grandfather taught speech. He became a teacher of the deaf, but with intense curiosity about how things worked, he experimented at night with transmitting sound. He was only 29 in 1876 when he invented the telephone, an innovation that has brought the world together.”

Eleanor and Franklin D. Roosevelt's granddaughter, Anna Roosevelt, with her Coach Chester Bag.

THE CLASSIC COLLECTION

“I’ve always been proud to be related to them. Especially Eleanor because of what she did for women. At the time, politicians’ wives were supposed to be seen, not heard. But in many ways, her agenda was one of the most progressive of any public figure in her time. She fought for civil rights and equality for women, including equal pay, as well as a federal department of education and the forty-eight hour workweek.”
